From our President

As we celebrate the second quarter of 2026, I am filled with gratitude and excitement as I look back on the incredible journey we've shared over the past three months. From April to June, we have witnessed remarkable growth, inspiring achievements, and countless moments that remind us why Gr8Life continues to rise.

This quarter's theme is momentum—and it is unmistakably building. One of our proudest highlights is recognizing Ryan Macaspac, our Top Performer for the Second Quarter of 2026, who achieved the highest sales average across the organization. Ryan's dedication, consistency, and commitment to excellence embody the Gr8Life spirit. His success is a testament to what is possible when passion meets discipline. Congratulations, Ryan, for setting a standard that inspires all of us to aim higher.

Our momentum has also been fueled by unforgettable milestones that strengthened our culture and expanded our horizons. We celebrated excellence during our Grand Recognition Night, challenged ourselves through the exciting 88-Day Challenge to Balesin, and continued to grow our global footprint with the Gr8Life Dubai branch visit. Our participation in the Nelson Pickleball Tournament and Labor Day Run reflected our commitment to wellness, teamwork, and community.

We also brought opportunities closer to more Filipinos through our Northern Caravan, while our May and June Acceler8 celebrations reminded us that every milestone deserves to be celebrated together.

Adding even more strength to our organization is the official joining of an industry powerhouse, Rey Ferrer. Her wealth of experience, leadership, and vision will undoubtedly contribute to the next chapter of Gr8Life's growth. We are honored to welcome her to the Gr8Life family.

Every event, every achievement, and every story featured in this issue reflects one important truth: Gr8Life is accelerating.

Madame President Racquel Buensuceso with Ryan Macaspac

We are no longer simply building momentum—we are transforming it into lasting impact. Together, we are creating opportunities, changing lives, and reaching heights that once seemed impossible.

As we move into the second half of 2026, let us continue to dream bigger, work smarter, support one another, and remain committed to our shared mission. The best chapters of our story are still ahead, and I have no doubt that, together, we will continue to rise to even greater heights. Thank you for being part of this extraordinary journey.

Let's continue to Rise to Gr8ness—together.

LEADING THE ROAD TO SUCCESS

the RyanMACASPAC JOURNEY

Visualise a cyclist leaning into a steep, grueling incline. The muscles burn, the lungs scream for air, and the summit feels impossibly far away. In that moment, you have two choices: quit and coast backward, or dig deep, shift gears, and push through the pain.

For Ryan Macaspac, Gr8Life's Top Performer of the 2nd Quarter of 2026, life has always been about the endurance to keep moving forward. Whether he is pounding the asphalt in running shoes, pedaling through tough terrains, or building a massive network marketing group, Ryan knows that success isn't a sprint—it's a marathon fueled by heart, grit, and an unwavering vision.

01 | The Starting Line: Where It All Began

Every great marathon runner starts at the exact same place: the beginning. Ryan grew up as a middle child in a bustling seven-member family. His father earned a living navigating the chaotic streets as a jeepney driver, while his mother managed a humble carinderia. Resources were tight, but love and dreams were plenty. Early on, Ryan experienced the beauty of generosity firsthand, being a frequent recipient of his relatives' kindness. This planted a seed in his young heart: he wanted to become wealthy, not just for himself, but to have the power to change lives and give back.

At 19, Ryan started his professional journey as an IT teacher in Subic. He was respected and secure, but his hunger for massive growth couldn't be contained by a classroom wall. When a friend introduced him to the world of network marketing, a lightbulb went off. He didn't need a hard sell; he immediately saw the power of leverage. As a natural people-person who thrived on connection, he knew this was his fast track to greatness.

With just a borrowed capital of ₱7,300, Ryan made a bold move. He resigned from his teaching job before the next school year even began. He stepped up to the starting line, locked his eyes on the prize, and pedaled forward. The risk paid off spectacularly—by the age of 21, just two years into the journey, he bought his very first car.

02 | From Steady Pace to Speedy Sprint: The Power of Mentorship

In cycling, drafting behind an experienced rider reduces wind resistance and allows you to go faster and farther. In business, that strategy is called mentorship. For Ryan, his ultimate pacer is none other than Gr8Life's Madame President, Racquel Buensuceso who said, "Ryan, gusto ko makita na maabot mo ang Top Performer sa Gr8Life."

It was a simple, quiet statement, but it echoed like a starting pistol in Ryan's mind. It pushed him to completely level up his game.

"We have established a strong bond," Ryan shares. "I can bet my family's future with her leadership. She brings out the best in me through her words of wisdom, her realizations, and more importantly, her example. I can relate to her story and am immensely inspired by it. It makes me believe that nothing is impossible—na kung ano ang na-achieve niya, kaya ko rin."

Driven by a deep sense of accountability to his mentor, Ryan shifted into high gear. He gave her his word that he would deliver, and he did: hitting his first million in Gr8Life in just eight months, earning his rightful place in the prestigious Guild of Leaders.

For Ryan, Gr8Life provided the perfect high-performance vehicle he had been searching for. Backed by a sincere, highly capable management team, world-class products, a stable corporate structure, and a fair, simple marketing plan, all he had to do was put his foot on the pedal.

03 | Detours and Struggles: Turning Hurdles into Fuel

No route is perfectly flat. Every athlete faces unexpected roadblocks, sudden cramps, or hitting "the wall." Ryan's ultimate test of endurance came in 2011 when his mother unexpectedly passed away. Suddenly, the very reason he was working so hard was gone. The grief was paralyzing; he lost his drive and was ready to completely abandon the race.

He also faced some financial failures. He experienced the sting of having a car repossessed, facing unpaid bills, and enduring power and water disconnections.

Even the daily grind of the business back then felt like an uphill battle against a fierce headwind.

"When I started, communication was very difficult and expensive," Ryan recalls. "Calls were limited and every text message cost one peso—malayo sa convenience ng internet, video calls, at endless chats ngayon. Before, we had to cut and give away physical flyers just to get leads. Sasabihin namin, hindi tayo kakain hangga't hindi nauubos ang flyers. Some people were rude; they'd even crumple and throw the flyer right in front of your face. Mapapaisip ka talaga: 'Dating respetadong teacher ako, bakit ko ba ginagawa 'to?'" If you are emotionally weak, those thoughts will end your career."

Instead of letting those rejections deflate his tires, Ryan used them as fuel. "I saw them as vitamins that made me stronger and more resilient. When it comes to business, you mustn't be emotional."

Even today, as technology makes communication effortless, Ryan notes that the modern "terrain" has shifted. The challenge now lies in cutting through the noise and impressing a highly skeptical audience. "Kung noon, impressive na ang ₱5,000, ngayon hindi na. But then again, you have to take these as challenges to overcome. It should motivate you to push yourself and produce impressive, undeniable results. You have to stay optimistic."

There was even a painful chapter where many of his downlines walked away—people he had spent years building up, mentoring, and pouring his heart into, gone in an instant. Ryan had no choice but to return to the drawing board and start from scratch.

How do you survive a devastating crash like that? You look up. "When something devastating happens, you have to hold on to your vision," Ryan says firmly. "It will be your North Star. It will be your guide amidst the darkness."

For me, that is my family - my sons and wife. They are my "why". They are the reason I push so hard.'

04 | Finish Lines are Just New Beginnings

Claiming the title of Top Performer for the 2nd Quarter of 2026 is a massive milestone—but for Ryan, it's just a checkpoint, not the final destination.

Much like running and cycling, navigating tough terrains builds your stamina. Every steep slope you conquer makes the next climb feel easier. "Being on top is not about looking down on others; it's about having the leverage to pull more people up to the peak with you," Ryan says with a smile.

What started as a grueling climb has now become a beautiful, fulfilling journey of leadership and self-growth. Looking forward, Ryan is gearing up to finish 2026 stronger than ever—eyeing a monthly income of ₱500,000 to ₱1,000,000, while driving Gr8Life to become a household name both locally and globally.

The road ahead is wide open, the elevation is high, and Ryan Macaspac is definitely not hitting the brakes.

The Ryan Macaspac ROADMAP:

5 Tips to Reach Your Destination
To help you navigate your own track to success, Ryan shares his personal champion's playbook:

01. Learn the Business (Master the Bike)

Understand your business through and through. You cannot ride a bike effectively if you don't know how the gears work, and you can't convince others to join you if you lack deep knowledge. "Never stop learning because situations never stop changing. Big or small, learn. Strategy, character development, leadership, social media—you have to adapt." Ryan proves this by adapting to the digital age: a simple Facebook "My Day" post caught a friend's attention, leading to a massive presentation that pulled in 30 product packages, instantly securing his children's tuition.

02. Dream Big (Map a Grand Route)

If your goals are small, a single pothole will wreck your journey. "With all the obstacles and failures you will face, if your dreams are too small, just one failure will destroy you." Ryan's ultimate destination? Retiring young at 50, securing his family's financial freedom, establishing solid assets, and building thriving business ventures.

03. Nothing Beats Hard Work (Put in the Mileage)

When you commit to the race, you don't count the kilometers; you just keep pedaling. Delay gratification. "Set yourself up to hit your goals as early as possible and work for results. You'll have more time to rest later." For Ryan, this includes the hard work of team building. "The relationship doesn't end after pay-ins; that's just the starting line. You have to adjust and recalibrate depending on the different personalities you encounter. Managing a team is hard work, but it pays off."

04. Make Your "Whys" Substantial (Your Internal Engine)

Your "Why" is the adrenaline that kicks in when your body wants to quit. For Ryan, it's his family. He works to give his children the beautiful upbringing he never had, securing their health and education. It's also for his wife—to honor her early sacrifices and prove that her decision to stand by him from the very beginning was worth it.

05. Never Stop Helping People (The Peloton Effect)

In cycling, a group of riders (a peloton) moves faster together than a single rider alone. "In our business, the more people you help, the better. The more people you help to earn, the more you will earn. Everybody wins with this mindset."
